Closing Exercises of the San Marcos

One week was devoted to a care- at noon with exercises in calisthenics. At ful written and oral examination for the night an exhibition of prize readings and purpose of re-grading for the ensuing scho- declamations was had, interspersed with lastic year. The examination during the last week was conducted in the several departments separate, and visitors invited. Grades A. and B. acquitted themselves with honor during an extended and thorough examination in arithmetic, Grammar and Algebra. Topical outlines were placed on the black-boards and slips of paper on which were written questions and problems, were placed in a box. Each pupil drew several cards and stood before the audience, answered the question, solved the problem choice music. This, we think, was second to none other similar we have ever been present at. All acquitted themselves so well that had we been on the committee of award, we should have been rather at a loss indetermining who was best entitled. We learn that Miss Sue Gorce was awardedthe first prize for her recitation of "The Vagabond," and Miss Ida Brockett for that of "Mark Twain on European Guides," and that Mr. Lee Cox was awarded the first prize in declamation. "Shamus O'Brien," and Charley Brown second for "How the Old Horse Won the Bet."

The examination continued Tuesday forelastic year. The examination during the choice music. This, we think, was second answered the question, solved the problem ited compliments from the large assembly of appreciative listeners.

Grades C. and D., Miss L. Wilcox teacher, passed a critical examination with honor to themselves and their instructor. Miss tendance at the commencement exercises at | Wilcox has certainly accomplished wonders in training and teaching the children and it would be difficult to fill the place of this esteemed lady in the school.

The pupits in grades E. and F., Miss May Joyce teacher, handled geometrical blocks with great confidence and talked of pentagons, hexagons, octagons and rectangles with as much ease as veterans in the abstruse science. The children gave evidence that Miss Joyce is an untiring worker and that she is highly gifted as a teacher of reading. She has made an excellent record in her department and we doubt not the future has in store for her honors brighter and more to be desired than the costlicat gems that ever flashed in royal crown.

The exercises in Mrs. A. Duncan's department were very interesting throughout. The children marched with blocks in hand to make their calculations. The results of her work more than sustained her well known reputation as a teacher of the pri-mary, that most difficult department, in won the love and obedience of all her pu-

The history class recitation, grades E. and F., was an enjoyable feature of the examination work. The pupils rapidly wrote on the black-board a topical outline and dates of the first period of History. Their recitations were topical, accompanied by constant reference to a large outline map. Each pupil seemed anxious to recite the entire work. The manuscript work done by the pupils was on exhibition and it elicited praise from all who gave it a careful inspection. Manuscript work is a novel one in our system of education, but it is a rigid and severe test of the pupil's proficiency. Many specimens of penmanship were arranged for inspection and indicated great improvement and also indicate the great care in this department to promote excellence.

The examination exercises were not gotten up for effect and display, but were th every-day workings of the schools, showing that the best Normal methods have been introduced.

The regular examination exercises were interspersed with dialogues, select readings, essays and declamations. Especial excel-lence was displayed by the little Misses and Masters who maintained a self possession which was remarkable, and their expresswhich was remarkable, and their expression in every instance exhibited careful elocutionary training. The little people did themselves great credit, but want of space forbids the pleasure of a special mention.

Miss Annie Vogelsang's "Excuse for Not Writing an Essay," was a facetions composition, containing many capital hits. Her enunciation was clear and distinct and her peopling reading was responded to with lusty peculiar reading was responded to with lusty applause. Upon special request she gave the essay a second radeing.

Miss Minnie Robertson, from the begining, held the attention of the audience. Her recitation "John Maynard" was fault-less, the enunciation the clearest possible and delivery in excellent taste.

Twenty-two pupils from C. and D. grades made the representations of the "Presi-dents," brimful of interest. Eddie Fortson in declamation and Eddie Fromme in select reading acquitted themselves with credit. Miss Neva Mosher read her essay grac fully and with fine effect. Her essay, "Flowers," was a pointed burlesque on "School Girls' Compositions." Its reading was highly enjoyed by all who caught the spirit of her composition.

Miss Mary Dailey read "The Bells of Shandon" in an artislic and fascinating way. For proper expression and polish of style her rendition cannot be surpassed. Her graceful manner won the hearts of all in at-Miss Gertie Garth, in "Caudle's Umbrella Lecture," made a happy hit in that capital piece of comedy. Her recitation was pro-nounced to be unexceptionably good. Miss Cornelia Dailey read the Valedictory essay, which was overflowing with beautifu

Mrs. Duncan's night of last week an exhibition of Major culture of mind and kindness of heart have Bishop's school. It was had in his new and as yet unfinished building, the audience being very pleasantly seated just outside. The exercises consisted of very good music, interspersed with sundry cantatas and other operatic performances, which were decidedly well done. The entire exhibition did credit to the young ladies participating. After the performance some of their handiwork in the way of embroidery, etc., was exdrawings of the Alamo and other old mis-

Mr.

He expects to have the new building ready lin are for occupancy at the beginning of the next term. It will be an excellent frame build-ing, two stories high, and of sufficient capacity for the accommodation of some thirty young ladies (the school is designed for them exclusively), not only for their tuition but also for their board and lodging with the family of the principal. When completed it will be the best school building in our town. Major Bishop deserves much credit for his enterprise, which we trust may not only be blest to the community, but also passingly somewhat to the ity, but also pecuniarily remunerative to the worthy proprietor and principal of the tchool and his excellent wife, who is to be his assistant.
